Q: Inserting 2D array in GAE using jinja template I would like to insert a 2D array into my model using jinja2. My issue is that I can't seem to figure out how to access the elements of the array by their index. For example, if I were using js and say res = [1,2,3,4,5]; it would be as simple as res[1] = 5; to update the array. How can I do this in jinja2? The method I am currently using works but it is not as clean as the previous method and it is still not as simple as js. Here is what I am currently doing:

```
{% set times=loop.index %} {% set row = times.row %} {% set col = times.col %} {% set j = 0 %} {% for key,val in tokens.items() %} {% set token_value = val[row][col] %} {{token_value|f|escape('html')}} {% set j = j +1 %} {% endfor %}
```

A: Try this:

```
{% loop.index[0] %} {{ loop.index[1] }}
```

The World Wildlife Fund (WWF) has released a new map highlighting the areas of the world with the highest level of environmental degradation. With Earth Day just around the corner, it's nice to take a look at a new map released by the World Wildlife Fund showing the world in color and giving visitors a better visual picture of their impact on the planet. In areas such as Malaysia and Indonesia, several small islands are seen to be completely covered in forest. Moreover, the amount of water and electricity needed to sustain the industries that take place on these islands is likely a fraction of what is required on the neighboring landmass. "Environmental degradation cannot be stopped but we can arrest and reverse its worst effects," says Grazia Andreone, Regional Director for the WWF's Asia Pacific in Malaysia and Indonesia. "This map shows the impact of human activity on forests, and uses the images to highlight the interconnection of every part of the globe. Through the gift of nature and the environment, we can create sustainable cities, economies and societies, one small island at a time." Do you have any tips for running a green business?
